PORT 'SHOULD PAY TO RESOLVE STACK'

DOVER Harbour Board should pay to relieve the problems caused by Operation Stack, according to the pressure group Protect Kent.

The county branch for the Campaign to Protect Rural England (CPRE) claims that the Port of Dover should pay to build the proposed lorry park off the M20, or for a similar scheme to alleviate the severe traffic caused when Stack is enforced.

Following news that the Government will not fund the proposed 35-acre lorry park at Aldington, the environmental group issued a statement via Facebook saying they feel the harbour should pay.

A spokesman for Protect Kent said: "We find it remarkable that the Port of Dover is able to plan its massive expansion, as it has, and expect the public purse to pay for its impacts when it gets into operating difficulties.

"No other organisation relies on Kent Police to sort things out when they can't cope.

"It would be beneficial if the Port of Dover accepted responsibility for paying for a solution.

"They should be required to plan around this, and the impact it has on the rest of the economy in Kent."

Despite the claims that DHB should pay for the lorry park, Protect Kent is against the principle of acres of countryside being developed to cope with hundred of lorries when Stack is introduced, although they still believe a solution should be funded by DHB.

"The lorry park, as it is currently proposed, is not a good idea because it will lead to the

PARKED UP: Lorries are currently made to wait on sections of the M20 when there are hold-ups at Dover sterilisation of a large area of land that won't be used very often," the spokesman said.

"We would prefer the use of the quick moveable barrier, which has not yet been given a fair chance to prove itself.

"The lorry park is not the right answer, but Operation Stack is a problem. If this gets people thinking about less environmentally-damaging solutions, it can only be a good thing."

Dover MP Charlie Elphicke believes that European funding should be used to resolve Stack.

He said: "What we need to do is have wider investment in Kent's roads.

"We need the A2 dualled, so we can have a double entry into Dover and take pressure off the M20.

"We need the lower Thames crossing to take pressure off West Kent and the M25.

"We need to have a much wider, cross-border investment, ideally using European money to upgrade our roads and upgrade the roads in Northern France.

"If there is any European money to go, I'd rather it went to England and Kent, than somewhere else like Greece."

The Port of Dover declined to make a comment.

Eastern and Coastal Kent NHS
Community Health
NHS Trust

Do you want to find out more about your local NHS services in the community?

We are holding a showcase event, which gives you the opportunity to find out more about some of the 36 services we provide like community dentistry, physiotherapy and community nursing.

A question and answer session near the end of the Showcase will give you the chance to ask any burning questions to the directors that manage your community services.

Information about how social services, charities and local voluntary organisations can help you will also be available.

On 27 January 2011, starting at 11am and finishing at 1pm, the Showcase will be held at:

The Ark,
Noah's Ark Road,
Dover,
CT17 0DD

Tel: 01304 225737

The Eastern and Coastal Kent Community Health NHS Trust Board Meeting in Public will also take place at The Ark on the same day starting at 1:30pm and closing at 4:30pm. Refreshments are provided between the Showcase and the Board Meeting.

Copies of the Board Papers are available on our website, please visit www.eckcommunityservices.nhs.uk.

For questions relating to the Board Meeting please contact Jill Mackenzie on 01233 667840 or email jill.mackenzie@eastcoastkent.nhs.uk.

Drug smugglers hid cocaine in secret bodysuit

EIGHT cruise line drug smugglers have been jailed for more than 100 years.

The gang of Bulgarians and Lithuanians who attempted to illegally bring about 35 kilos of cocaine into the UK through the Dover cruise terminal have been sentenced to a collective 108 years in prison.

Canterbury Crown Court heard how UK Border Agency (UKBA) officers searched the cruise liner MSC Orchestra when it arrived in Dover on May 6, 2010, en route to Amsterdam from Brazil.

Whilst exploring the ship, in four cabins they found a bodysuit which was designed to be worn under outer clothing with individual packets of the class A drugs stitched into the lining.

In a fifth room, a spare partial body suit was also discovered, that contained no drugs.

Two Bulgarian men, two Bulgarian women, three Lithuanian men and one Lithuanian woman were arrested and later charged.

The four Bulgarians admitted knowing each other, as did the four Lithuanians, but each group denied knowing the other.

Seven had pleaded guilty to attempting to smuggle the cocaine and the eighth was found guilty after trial at Canterbury Crown court on November 3, 2010.

Malcolm Bragg, Criminal and Financial Assistant Director for the UK Border Agency, said: "These drug smugglers thought they would go unnoticed by posing as cruise ship passengers.

"They were wrong. We've got our eye on every possible smuggling route into the UK.

"We know the lengths that organised criminals will go to and will stop at nothing to bring them to justice.

"The sentences handed down today send a clear message to people considering smuggling drugs

SECRET STASH: This suit, designed to carry class A drugs, was found in four cabins on the cruise liner that you will have your freedom taken away from you for several years.

"Drugs like cocaine devastate lives and communities. Anyone with information about activity they suspect may be linked to drug smuggling should call our hotline on 0800 59 5000."

Ilko Tichkov, 26, of Blagoevgrad, Bulgaria, received 12 years; Mihaela Tichova, 20, of Blagoevgrad, Bulgaria, and Gintaras Bernotonis, 45, of Siauliai, Lithuania, was given a 13-and-a-half year sentence; Kostadin Malev, 46, of Blagoevgrad, Bulgaria received 20 years.

Rytis Bernotonis, 22, of Siauliai, Lithuania, and Valerij Ivanov, 35, of Siauliai, Lithuania received 14 years each.

Violeta Ivanova, 48, of Siauliai, Lithuania and Maria Kosturkova, 20, of Blagoevgrad, Bulgaria, each received a 10-and-a-half year jail sentence.

Arrests after teenager survives shooting

AN 18-year-old man is in hospital after being shot in the chest in Dover.

He was taken to the William Harvey Hospital in Ashford under an armed escort in the early hours of Tuesday morning and later transferred to a London hospital.

Doctors say he is in a serious but stable condition.

A 17-year-old man, were arrested and the older man remains in custody.

Police raided a number of addresses in Dover and say they have recovered a revolver.

Officers say the victim knew his alleged assailant.

Police closed the road but re-opened it shortly after 7am, although officers remain at the scene in Frith Road and door to door enquiries are being made as Youdover went to press.

Charlton Cemetery is also cordoned off for examination.

Area Commander Chris Hogben said: "I would stress that this is an isolated incident involving local people from a small social group.

"I don't think this should cause too much concern to the local community."

Police have asked for anyone with information to call 0800 555 111.

Stowaways found in Dover-bound trucks

THE UK Border Agency (UKBA) has prevented a series of would-be illegal immigrants entering the country.

Officers in Calais have discovered a number of stowaways trying to enter Britain through Dover.

The would-be illegal immigrants were found on Wednesday, January 5, Saturday, January 8, and Monday, January 10, as part of an on-going campaign with sniffer dogs to prevent unlawful entry into the UK.

On Wednesday, January 5, two lorries were stopped and were found to have stowaways onboard.

Three Iranian men, three Vietnamese men and an Iraqi man, were found in the back of a lorry transporting batteries, while another group of four Iranians were discovered in a trailer of dehydrated paper.

Two Indian men were caught in a lorry of fertiliser on Saturday, January 8, in Calais, while five more Iranian men were found in a trailer of books.

All were denied entry to the UK and handed over to the French border authorities.

The lorry drivers and haulage companies face fines of up to £2,000 per stowaway, unless they are able to prove that they took adequate steps to secure their vehicles.

Training centre 'to boost town'

A NEW adult training centre in Market Square has been opened.

The ceremony saw Mayor Susan Jones and MP Charlie Elphicke unveil the new Pitman training facility.

Centre manager Paula Elliott said: "We are thrilled to announce the opening of our new facilities. It is so exciting for all the team, and we look forward to welcoming students new and old.

"The new centre has increased in size to respond to the growing demands for our services and we are also now able to offer access to the training suite seven days a week."

Also at the opening ceremony was former Pitman student Stacie Pettman, who was the Pitman student of the year prize for 2010.

Miss Pettman said: "I am so proud of what I have achieved with the help and support of everyone at Pitman Training, they have been brilliant.

"Receiving this award is the icing on the cake, and I am really hoping to do everyone proud by realising my potential when I start my new job.

"Thanks to Paula and the team, I feel like I can do anything!"

In a message at the ribbon cutting, Mayor Jones stated that Dover has many people working towards a common aim: to help the town survive the recession and come out of it ready for regeneration.

Dover MP Mr Elphicke, who cut the ribbon, said: "It is a pleasure to mark the occasion of the opening of the new Pitman Training centre in this way, and I am very impressed by the facilities.

"Training for local people is vital to strengthen the economy and Pitman Training offers great opportunities for development in Dover.

"Seeing a local business do well in a challenging financial climate is very impressive and I look forward to seeing it continue to flourish."

Town gets raw Deal as sex show reveals visit

■ BY STEVE KNIGHT

X-RATED moviemakers are aiming to shatter the image of a quaint seaside town by enticing young women to engage in sex acts for a raunchy roadshow.

The American DVD series Girls Gone Wild is expanding into the UK and plans to hit Deal this summer, after the tourist hotspot was bizarrely voted one of the top locations fans would like the brand to visit.

Locals are horrified that their charming coastal town – loved for its coffee shops, pier and castle – could be overrun by women exposing their breasts and genitals while large crowds of men holler their approval.

“Deal is a wonderful town and we all want to see more tourism here, but not this sort of tourism,” said MP Charlie Elphicke (Con).

“I think residents and parents will be deeply concerned because it’s not the right location at all for this sort of thing.”

“It’s just exploiting young women and should be deeply discouraged. The people behind it should be sent packing back to America because we don’t want them here.”

Behind such films as ‘Best of Horny Schoolgirls’ and ‘Spring Break Orgy’, the Girls Gone Wild franchise has attracted a global fan base since its first video was released in 1998.

It now has its own UK pay-per-view channel on Sky Box Office, where it has been running a text vote of possible locations. Surprisingly, Deal finished near the top of the poll.

EXPLOITING WOMEN: The raunchy American Girls Gone Wild tour plans to bring its tour bus to Deal this summer, when the brand expands into the UK

“It doesn’t seem appropriate for Deal or its image,” said Dover council leader Cllr Paul Watkins (Con). “The town has a good tourist reputation and we don’t want that tarnished.”

In addition to encouraging young women to expose their bodies, the Girls Gone Wild crew also entice them back to their tour bus to engage in more explicit sexual activity.

In 2006, the firm behind the franchise – Mantra Films – was fined $1.6 million for failing to create and maintain age and identity records of the women featured in the films.

But Girls Gone Wild is still alive and well and claims to be in discussions with Dover council as to where this summer’s roadshow might be held – a claim the authority denies.

A spokesman said: “We have had no involvement in this matter.”

“We have not been contacted by this company and have not given permission for the use of any locations for which the council is responsible.”

A Girls Gone Wild spokesman said: “We are keen to hear from local business people who have suitable venues for the Girls Gone Wild tour bus to visit, and have also been approaching the council about suitable outdoor locations.”

Cracking down on nuisance bikers

A POLICE crackdown on nuisance off-road bikers has resulted in eight formal warnings and a motorcycle being seized.

Officers from the Kent Police motorcycle team have been working alongside neighbourhood officers to target the disruption caused by the illegal riders.

The campaign follows complaints from residents about noise and concerns for the safety of riders and walkers.

The clampdown started on New Year’s Eve, when two men were stopped at the Tilmanstone pit site.

A 51-year-old man from Canterbury was issued with a formal warning. His motorbike was seized when it was discovered that it was stolen.

A 30-year-old man, also from Canterbury, was formally warned not to ride at the site and told that his bike would be seized if he was caught again.

The police teams were out again on Saturday, January 8, and Sunday, January 9, when a further six warnings were issued at Tilmanstone, Coldblow Woods and the Coombe Valley areas.

Inspector Guy Thompson said: “Illegal off-roading is dangerous and causes a nuisance and we will continue to target this activity.”

Arrested after attack on shopper

A MAN has been arrested after allegedly headbutting a shopper in a supermarket.

David Biggs, 42, from Salisbury Road, Dover, is reported to have attacked a 52-year-old man in the NETTO store in Charlton Green last Saturday evening.

Biggs was charged with common assault and released on bail, to answer before Folkestone Magistrates Court on Wednesday, January 19.

Plan to boost cheaper homes

DOVER District Council is looking to boost the number of affordable houses built by changing planning legislation.

The proposals will set out options for smaller schemes of five to 14 dwellings to get a financial contribution if they are creating affordable homes. Under current legislation, only schemes that build 15 or more houses are eligible for a financial contribution.

A public consultation period of eight weeks runs until midnight on Sunday, March 10. A version of the draft Supplementary Planning Document (SPD) is available for public inspection at the main council offices, area offices, and Deal Town Council during their normal working hours.

Once adopted, the SPD will form part of the Dover Local Development Framework.

If you would like to comment on this SPD, comments can be made direct at www.dover.gov.uk/df. This is the preferred method as it makes collation and analysis of comments much easier and quicker.

Comments can also be emailed to forwardplanning@dover.gov.uk, or posted to Dover District Council, Forward Planning Section, White Cliffs Business Park, Dover, Kent, CT16 3PJ.

For details, call the Forward Planning Team on 01304 872477.

Ferry firms back bid to promote tourism

P&O FERRIES and DFDS Seaways have announced a partnership with the Government, in a bid to boost tourism in the UK.

The ferry companies have been named as two of the founding partners of the initiative to boost tourist numbers to Britain.

The Prime Minister launched the partnership between VisitBritain and the travel and tourism sector at an event in Downing Street on Wednesday, January 5, attended by P&O passenger services director Simon Johnson.

Mr Johnson said: “As the eyes of the world focus on Britain in the run-up to the 2012 Olympics, we have a rare opportunity to build inbound tourism.”

“We welcome the government’s commitment and look forward to working with VisitBritain as a founding partner of this initiative.”

Chris Newey, director of passenger services for the English Channel route at DFDS Seaways, said: “DFDS Seaways has pledged a substantial monetary investment towards the Government’s marketing fund, designed to boost tourism.”

“As one of the main gateways to Europe, Dover is well placed to benefit from the £100 million already committed to the fund, which will see significant investment in the UK tourism industry, and we are delighted to be part of this initiative.”

“The DFDS passenger network, and in particular the Dover-Dunkirk route, is already benefitting from a strong growth in inbound passenger numbers, and with significant events such as the Royal Wedding, and the Olympic Games all taking place over the next couple of years, we hope to see this continue.”

A spokesman for VisitBritain said: “This is a collective effort by the travel and tourism sector. The private sector is matching the Government’s commitment with its own.”

Worker crushed by metal jaws in dustcart horror

■ BY STIAN ALEXANDER

A DUSTMAN was crushed to death by the massive jaws at the rear of his bin lorry.

Horrified villagers and colleagues watched as the man became trapped in the waste crusher of his bin lorry in Eastry, near Sandwich, on Tuesday, last week.

Adeyinka Aderoba, originally from Nigeria, was emptying household bins into the back of the truck at about 12.40pm when he became trapped by the machine's metal jaws and was crushed.

Firefighters desperately tried to free Mr Aderoba from the mechanism, but he was pronounced dead at the scene after suffering severe injuries to his head and torso.

The 44-year-old was employed by SITA, the company contracted by Dover District Council to collect refuse and recycling.

Paul Vanstone, of Kent Fire and Rescue Service, said: "The man was in the back of the truck where the refuse goes and firefighters had to find a way of reversing the mechanism off him."

A SITA official said: "Our thoughts and condolences are with Mr Aderoba's family and friends at this difficult time. We are offering counselling to staff."

Police are not treating the death as suspicious but are working with the Health and Safety Executive to provide a report to the coroner.

Residents in Centenary Gardens, where the accident happened, were asked to stay with friends and relatives after police cordoned off the road. Local Michelle Chitty said: "My condolences to his family and workmates. Mr Aderoba was always so polite, helpful and cheerful – we will miss seeing him on his round."

TRAGIC DEATH: Adeyinka Aderoba

One villager, who did not want to be named, said he had watched the horror unfold: "I saw this happen from my window – It was pretty shocking to see."

Picture: RNLI/RAMSGATE

Crew rescued from Goodwins

FIVE people were airlifted to safety before their yacht sank after running aground in the English Channel.

The 35ft boat became stuck on the Goodwin Sands at about 1.30pm on Sunday.

Both Ramsgate lifeboats – the all-weather Trent class Esme Anderson and the inshore Atlantic 75 Bob Turnbull – were launched to assist the stranded vessel.

Due to shallow breaking water around the yacht, the RNLI decided a lifeboat rescue was not the best option as those on board were not in immediate danger.

It was agreed with the coastguard the best course of action was to await the next rising tide and attempt to tow the yacht off the Goodwins.

A rescue helicopter had been called in from RAF Wattisham and all the yacht's crew were lifted off at 3.40pm and flown ashore, to safety.

At 6.10pm, with the tide having risen, the inshore lifeboat managed to get a line aboard the yacht and bring it clear of the sands. However, the vessel began to sink, so the only possible action was to release the tow line, note the position to report to the coastguard.

It was thought the keel had been badly damaged in running aground and by the action of the tide and sands.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Backing Hugh's Fish Fight

ENVIRONMENTAL group Deal With It has joined a national campaign to prevent fish discards at sea.

TV chef Hugh Fearnley-Whittingstall is championing the cause which aims to cut the number of caught but unwanted fish that are thrown back, dead or dying, by fishermen.

Hugh's Fish Fight on Channel 4 showed how unwanted fish are discarded from boats in the North Sea. More than 500,000 people have registered their support online at www.fishfight.net. The movement is not only about discards, but is trying to get people to think about eating sustainable fish such as coley and mackerel, rather than cod, haddock, tuna or salmon. Deal With It has supported the effort by talking to local fishmongers and getting them to back the campaign by putting posters up in their windows.

Medical open day at Ark

NHS Eastern and Coastal Kent is holding a special event to highlight the services on offer.

The medical open day will be in Dover on Sunday, January 27, and give people the chance to find out more about some of the 36 services provided, including community dentistry, physiotherapy and community nursing.

A question and answer session will give people the chance to talk to the directors who manage community services.

The showcase will be at The Ark, in Noah's Ark Road, from 11am to 1pm. Click on www.eckcommunityservices.nhs.uk for more.

Tune in to Freeview signal

FREEVIEW viewers in east Kent will need to retune their equipment after an important change to local signals.

The alteration to the signal from the Dover transmitter will be on Wednesday, next week, and is expected to start at midnight and be completed by 6am. All Freeview, BT Vision and Top-Up TV boxes, as well as digital TVs, will have to be retuned. An estimated 109,000 viewers are served by the Dover transmitter.

Freeview channels are moving frequency to protect from interference when switchover happens in neighbouring areas of France and the UK.

The University of Kent makes a major economic, social and cultural contribution to the area and is one of the region's largest employers. It employs over 2,000 academic and non-academic staff and has 16,000 students in Canterbury.

In 2010/2011, the University expects to contribute at least £200 million to the economy in the Canterbury district.

The project represents a £60 million direct investment by the University during construction of the project that will, in turn, deliver significant local employment opportunities, as well as increased expenditure in the local economy.

ARCHANT KOS MEDIA CAMPAIGN ISSUES COUNTYWIDE CALL TO ARMS TO KENT BUSINESSES

Time to roll up our sleeves and work together for prosperity

■ BY STEVE KNIGHT

THIS newspaper calls on employers throughout the county to join together and support our new campaign to Keep Kent Working.

With unemployment at its highest rate in years and Government spending cuts in full force, now is the perfect time for businessmen and women across the region to collaborate and improve the Kent economy for all.

Our campaign aims to keep people in work, generate jobs and develop our talent for the future.

It will provide a forum for local companies to demonstrate what they are doing to aid the recovery – be it by taking on new apprentices or coming up with innovative new ways of working – while also acting as a launch-pad for firms to join together and share their expertise.

Archant KOS Media has faced difficult decisions itself in recent times, as have many businesses within the county.

Managing director Paul Stannard said: "We ourselves have had to make tough decisions, and it is from this backdrop that we decided to do something positive and use our media as a vehicle for employers and organisations – as well as the wider community – to communicate how adaptable the business community in Kent is to dealing with change and to make sure the people of Kent know what opportunities are out there."

The Keep Kent Working campaign already has the backing of Kent County Council and the Federation of Small Businesses.

"Anything that gets businesses working together to create more employment opportunities for people – and especially young people – absolutely gets my backing," said Kent County Council's cabinet member for regeneration and economic development, Cllr Kevin Lynes. "There could be a little more thought between businesses about the beginning and the end."

Cllr Lynes pointed to KCC's support scheme for employers, which drastically reduces the bureaucracy involved with taking on an apprentice, as an example of how different organisations can work together for the benefit of all.

He added: "The benefit of investing in youth is that you get a huge amount of enthusiasm, energy and drive that comes with being young.

"Letting young people look at things with a fresh pair of eyes and question the way in which they do things can be so valuable to businesses, and can give them a serious edge over their competitors."

The Keep Kent Working campaign manager

Claire Trevill, who has vast experience of business in Kent, says she fully understands what employers and employees are going through.

She has worked closely with the Government's Future Jobs Fund and is acting as a business mentor for young people with the Prince's Trust charity.

"Everyone is aware that these are tough economic times, but that creates an opportunity for doing things differently," said Miss Trevill. "And that includes how businesses recruit their staff and how they take on apprentices and offer graduate placements.

"Our proximity to London has also become a blessing and a curse, because we lose many of our best workers there. But now's the time to stop the brain drain and for Kent employers to fight back and keep the talent here."

"Keep Kent Working is a positive campaign and I'm pleased this newspaper is giving employers and employees the platform to communicate good employment practice as well as to raise awareness of what help is out there to keep Kent strong."

To achieve the aims of our campaign we will need everyone to contribute. We may lead the Keep Kent Working initiative, but we also welcome any ideas or suggestions.

Don't let fuel thieves make off with yours

Theft of heating and diesel oil has been a problem for many years and the police have always noticed an increase in this type of crime whenever the price of crude oil rises and temperatures start to plunge outside, due to a rise in demand.

This makes oil a more attractive proposition for the thief and they are now actively targeting fuel tanks at farms, transport depots and domestic properties.

The thief may be using the oil for their own central heating or selling it on at a handsome profit.

Although it may seem like a bargain at the time, I strongly advise not to buy from unregistered oil traders. Not only does this practice mean that the cycle of thefts continues, but as it is unregulated, the oil could become contaminated by being stored in dirty tanks and actually cause thousands of pounds worth of damage to boilers and generators.

If the price seems to good to be true – it probably is!

It's worth buying a good quality lock for the tank, such as a close shackle padlock, which are difficult to remove with bolt cutters.

Remote electronic oil level gauges are also available which will set off an audible alarm if the oil level in the tank suddenly drops or falls below a quarter full.

In addition, thieves will not wish to force their way through or over a prickly hedge. The smallest trace of blood or shred of ripped clothing could help police identify the offender.

Using defensive planting around your tank, provides an effective and decorative thief proof barrier.

Tax dodgers deserve visit from the bailiffs

Looking at your story on the front page last week Tax Dodgers Have Nowhere to Hide, you could think that the council is being harsh.

Using bailiffs to collect owed money may be an extreme measure, but it is a necessary evil to stop others having to fork out and make up the difference.

At some point someone has to stand up and say this is what you owe, now pay it! And I am pleased that our council has the gumption to do that.

Too many people get away with not paying tax when the rest of us pull our weight, so it only right that those who have not paid are made to.

Now all we need is the council to stand up and get a few more things done with this new found gumption.

Do that and Maidstone might just make it out of this mess we call a democracy.

Gift a goat to help in fight against poverty

Oxfam Unwrapped's goats are an extremely effective way to help improve the lives of poor people, using locally-sourced, responsibly-distributed livestock to make a massive difference in more than 60 countries.

We launched our range in 2004 and the goat gift is a popular choice – for the gift buyer, there's obvious appeal, but for the family that receives the goat, it becomes absolutely central to their lives.

They can not only be used for milk or food but as an asset to trade, giving families access to credit for food during low seasons or an income to send their children to school and then growing their wealth as it produces kids.

At Oxfam we know only too well the impact that the environment has on poor people and are careful not to upset existing ecological balances.

We don't bring in goats from other areas – we redistribute livestock within villages, so the environmental impact is minimal.

We also assess the potential impact on natural resources by talking to local people who have detailed knowledge of grazing patterns and feeding practices.

Animal welfare is considered every step of the way and our programme guidelines are endorsed by the RSPCA.

We never promote animal husbandry above agriculture. But in some areas it is simply too dry to grow enough crops, so raising livestock is the only option.

Thanks to people's generosity we have raised an incredible £60 million to help thousands of people living in poverty around the world.

Rick Lay, Oxfam Unwrapped campaign manager

Meningitis vigilance crucial during winter

I am writing to thank all your readers who supported the Meningitis Trust during 2010.

It's only with the help of local communities that we are able to continue our vital work helping to rebuild lives shattered by meningitis.

The Meningitis Trust relies entirely on voluntary donations, which means support from individuals, families, schools, nurseries and businesses to survive.

This year we celebrate our 25th anniversary; a quarter of a century of supporting people as they face life after meningitis.

Meningitis can strike anyone, of any age, at any time. Those who survive can be left with devastating after-effects including loss of hearing, sight, brain damage and, where septicaemia (blood poisoning) has occurred, loss of limbs.

The Meningitis Trust urges people to be vigilant of the symptoms and trust their instincts. Symptoms can include, fever, headache, stiff neck, dislike of bright lights, drowsiness, joint pain, vomiting, diarrhoea and, in some cases but not all, a rash that doesn't fade under pressure. For more information, call the trust's freephone 24-hour helpline staffed by nurses on 0800 028 18 28 or log on to www.meningitis-trust.org.

Thank you all once again and best wishes for 2011.

Anne Currie, Meningitis Trust

QUESTION & ANSWER

JOHN BAILEY

Q & A

The owner of wartime memorabilia shop Still in the Trenches spoke to James Alexandre about his fascination with military history, the significance of a handmade flag and the joys of living in Kent.

Q Tell us a little about yourself.

A I'm 59 and took early retirement from a major PLC just over two years ago. I'm married and have two grown-up kids. I live just outside Ashford.

Q When did you first become interested in the First World War and military history?

A My father and all my uncles were in the forces in WWII and I was brought up hearing stories from the war. I acquired my first military item when I was about seven years old. I swapped a Mars bar for a brass Spitfire that a school friend's father had made in the RAF. I've still got it. I became very interested in the First World War after visiting the Somme in the mid 1980s and was amazed by what I saw. I then started researching my two grandfathers' part in the Great War.

Q What inspired you to set up Still in the Trenches in Folkestone?

A I had done a little spare time trading in militaria and felt that Kent needed a five-day-a-week military history shop where people could buy interesting and genuine items at reasonable prices.

Many military collectors' shops have closed as the internet has grown, but I saw a need for people to be able to see and touch things before they buy them. In collecting, condition is very important and many people are often dis-pointed with things they buy over the internet. I also restore items and will track things down for people. I can sometimes do research into customers' grandfathers' WWI history.

Q Tell us about the flag you recently discovered.

A I bought the flag from a local collector who had acquired it 12-15 years ago. It was made by a French woman in Calais during 1944 to welcome the liberating troops. It's made mainly from parachute silk, plus what looks like the gold edging from a tablecloth. It is quite crudely made. I am investigating a couple of leads on the French woman, but it's early days yet.

Q What are the favourite items in your collection and why?

A I do like military paperwork, such as the documents a soldier would have had in his service from recruitment to discharge. I have those papers for my father and one of my grandfathers and it is far more human than the metalwork and hardware of war. I've also got a lot of Home Guard training manuals and papers. I think the Home Guard was amazing.

Q What kind of items would typically be considered of historic military significance?

A There are many iconic items that come from the two world wars. The Lee Enfield rifle was probably the finest service rifle ever and has become a classic. It had a British service life of 60 years and is still going strong in India. Similarly the Mills grenade, which was designed in 1915, modified in 1917 and then remained in service for another 55 years completely unchanged. I also think First World War medals are potent symbols of the terrible experiences soldiers had of trench warfare.

Q What do you think of the social and cultural life of the area?

A My wife and I moved to Ashford from south east London four years ago and wished we had done it earlier. The quality of life here is far better, with the superb countryside and coastline. There seem to be many more people actively trying to make Kent a better place.

Q How can people find out more about you and Still in the Trenches?

A They can learn a lot from the website but also I'd like them to come to the shop in the Old High Street, Folkestone. I like to chat with my customers and have had some incredible people in the shop – D-Day veterans, serving soldiers, Blitz survivors, and V1 witnesses. Recently a marvellous lady who was in the French resistance visited the shop.

Q Tell us something that people don't know about you.

A In the mid 1980s I qualified as a pilot and even got to fly a WWII military aircraft.

A re you worried that your parents or other older relatives may be unable to cope in their own home? Do you find the thought of having to consider residential care hard to accept?

McCarthy & Stone's new Assisted Living development in Cheriton could be the answer.

"They've thought of absolutely everything. We ran out of questions to ask!"

We're very happy we made the move. Both in our 80s, we look after each other as best we can but it's good to know now that there's someone on hand should either of us need help.

Laurel Court enables residents to continue to be a home owner but with round the clock support, that can be tailored to meet individual needs. Importantly, Assisted Living can help older homeowners retain their independence in a safe and secure, friendly environment, amongst like minded people.

Flexible support services

Lunch is served every day in the waitress service restaurant and meals can even be bought to your apartment in the event of illness. One hour's domestic assistance is included in the service charge but this service is totally flexible and extra assistance can be purchased to meet either long or short term needs. The same applies to personal care which is available from the appointed care agency.

Tailor-made facilities

The facilities at Laurel Court have been designed to ensure that you can do everything that you would do in your own home, but far more easily.

The apartments have a fitted kitchen, a level access shower in addition to a bath and full wheelchair access. Facilities also include a laundry and residents' lounge where you can socialise with fellow residents. For entertaining your own visitors, there is a function room and a hotel style guest room for putting up family and friends.

Security brings peace of mind

Security is often a particular concern for the older homebuyer. Laurel Court benefits from advanced security systems like a 24-hour emergency call service and CCTV at the main entrance.

"It's perfect, just right for Mum."

Living on her own and so far away I was always worried for Mum. She struggled with everyday things but I couldn't help. Now she's on my doorstep and so well looked after. We're both really happy.

Where else could you find such a balance of independence and convenience under one roof?

ASSISTED LIVING

Jobless total falls despite downturn

UNEMPLOYMENT fell by 21 per cent in Medway last year, new figures have shown.

The decrease equates to 1,658 fewer claimants of Jobseeker's Allowance across the towns.

At the beginning of 2010, Medway had 7,659 residents claiming the allowance but by the end of the year that figure had fallen to 6,001.

The 21 per cent fall was larger than the national average of 15 per cent during the same period.

Youth unemployment, affecting 18 to 24 year olds, also fell more in Medway than in any other unitary authority across the entire country, dropping 770 to 1,760 – 30 per cent.

This is nearly twice as much as the national average fall of 15.4 per cent and a stronger fall than the regional average of 24 per cent.

Support

Medway Council's economic growth boss, Jane Chitty, said: "In spite of the recession, we refused to allow this to distract us from the real opportunities and we stand by our commitment to support the people of Medway."

"We are determined to help get Medway back to work and while I am delighted at these figures, I accept there is more to be done and we are looking at a range of initiatives to ensure we don't lose momentum."

"Medway Council has responded to the recession by securing funding from central government and ensuring our residents have the services and advice they need to get back into work, whether that be further training, CV advice or personalised support."

Give Flowers deal time to grow, savers urged

■ BY STEVE KNIGHT

THE chief executive of Kent Reliance Building Society has asked its members not to make rash judgements over the £50 million deal with JC Flowers.

A minority of savers who voted against the agreement – which represents the first private-sector investment in the mutual banking sector – claim the business will now no longer be run with their best interests at heart.

JC Flowers, which has offices in New York and London, is a private equity investment firm focused on the financial services industry.

Run by billionaire and Harvard graduate J Christopher Flowers, the firm failed in its attempt to purchase Northern Rock before the bank was saved by the British taxpayer in 2008.

But while admitting his new partners will ultimately want to make a profit, KRBS chief executive Mike Lazenby said it was too early to make predictions about the future of the business.

"We will continue to run as a mutual until JC Flowers owns 90 per cent of the business, which is a long way off," he said.

"They have also agreed not to pay any dividends to investors for the next five years, which is an incredibly long time in business. For example, five years ago we couldn't possibly have imagined the economy would be the way it is today.

"If they decide after five years they want their money back – and it's not been agreed that they will – then that would give us the option to buy them out.

"It's not a given that everything will be over and we'll become a proper bank.

"Five years is a long way off and a lot of things will happen before then. In the meantime we'll be going back to lending people money, which we haven't been able to do for some time, and we'll be offering some pretty good rates."

With assets of more than £2.2 billion, KRBS is the 12th largest building society in the UK and has served the people of the county for more than 150 years.

At least 75 per cent of KRBS members had to vote in favour of the JC Flowers deal for it to be passed, and it scraped through with 75.8 per cent of the ballot.

The Chatham-based society will now transfer all of its business, assets and liabilities to a new bank called OneSavings, which is expected to become effective on February 1, pending approval from the Financial Services Authority.

In the meantime KRBS has been busy securing eight new branches in towns as far away as Gloucester, Bristol and Devon, which Mr Lazenby says would not have been possible without the £50m investment.

And despite once describing high street branches as "liabilities", he is also looking to expand the business and open more offices on home turf in Kent.

"There will always be people who want to access a high street branch," said Mr Lazenby.

"But we have to make sure they're in the right place and that they will be used when they're open, otherwise they're just a drain on our resources.

"For example, our agency in Strood [at First Call Mortgage Services in the High Street] is totally inappropriate for what we're using it for. But we want to keep a presence in the town so we'll be opening a new office in its place."

Baccalaureate a blow to grammars

A CONTROVERSIAL scoring system introduced to boost the number of pupils studying traditional academic subjects has exposed failings in Kent's grammar schools.

Official statistics revealed that while selective schools continue to excel in GCSEs, under the English baccalaureate scheme many are lagging behind.

The qualification is awarded to pupils who achieve five A* to C grades in English, maths, a science, a foreign language, and a humanity.

Schools were previously only judged on the number of pupils who achieve five A* to C grades in any subjects.

At the Harvey Grammar School in Folkestone, only 27 per cent of pupils received the baccalaureate certificate, and just 33 per cent at Dover Grammar School for Boys.

While six selective schools in Kent achieved above 80 per cent – with Dartford Grammar School gaining the highest at 97 per cent – others only managed to scrape average scores, and six fell below 50 per cent.

Twenty-eight grammars, however, had 95 per cent or more of their pupils achieving five A* to C grades, including English and maths – Maidstone's Invicta Grammar School achieved 100 per cent for a second consecutive year.

Education secretary Michael Gove said including baccalaureate results in the league tables would help tackle the slump in the study of core subjects.

However, headteachers say it is unfair on schools where less academic pupils do well in vocational courses.

Pupils put under pressure in battle to pass Kent Test

■ BY MARIJKE COX

PARENTS of children as young as five are trying to hire private tutors for 11-plus coaching as the demand for grammar school places rockets.

Tutors across the county said they had been inundated with calls from parents desperate to start preparing their children, despite the exam, known as the Kent Test, being up to six years away in some cases.

The influx is being blamed on the huge demand for grammar school education. Last September 10,947 youngsters aged 10-11 sat the test for just 4,475 places in the academic year starting in September 2011.

Tutors said competition was fierce and parents were going to extreme lengths to secure their child a place.

Kent and Medway tutor Patricia Matthewman, principle of the Eleven Plus Academy, said year five, aged 9-10, was young enough to start coaching.

"I don't believe starting younger than that is beneficial," she said.

"We have had parents asking for tutoring for younger children and we've turned them away. Some calls were for year three children (7-8) and others even younger, specifically for the 11-plus.

"General tutoring in subjects such as creative writing is fine at any age, but tutoring for the 11-plus at a young age does not help.

"I can understand why parents want to do this, but it really is unsuitable. Coaching for 12

ALL WORK, NO PLAY: Pupils are being put under too much pressure at an early age, say education experts months before they take the test is adequate."

Mrs Matthewman said the high demand for grammar school places was pushing parents to try and start tutoring early.

But another Kent tutor, who works in the Maidstone area, said the idea tutoring would secure a grammar school place was misguided.

"It's more about the child. Even the brightest won't always be suitable for grammar schools," she said.

"I've been contacted by parents with children of five asking for 11-plus tutoring, but it's too young – year five is the right time."

The tutor, who asked not to be named for professional reasons, said she had been inundated with requests.

"I've had parents call up about children as young as six. "There's a year four girl (aged eight) whose parents asked if she could have in excess of an hour's tutoring, which is too long for someone that age.

"I think the demand for places is because of the view that grammar schools are better than other secondaries, which isn't necessarily right."

Figures from Kent County Council showed 10,947 children sat the Kent Test in September, 2010, to start secondary school in the 2011 academic year.

A spokesman said even if a child passes the exam it does not necessarily mean they will be given a grammar school placement.

"Many grammar schools are their own admissions authority," he said. "KCC cannot guarantee that a grammar-assessed child will be offered a grammar school."

"Parents will need to look at the oversubscription criteria of individual schools to identify the likelihood of securing a place."

Marian Darke, south east regional secretary of teaching union the NUT, said there was too much pressure being put on children to pass the Kent Test.

"There is more and more pressure to get them through the test, rather than allowing them to enjoy their education," she said.

"It's making it all about succeeding or failing, and this isn't good for children."

"Pressure is being put on parents because they are being led to believe to get a good education you have to go to a grammar school, which isn't right."

"Education should be about developing, not about labelling children who don't go to a grammar school as failures. Tutoring young children puts far too much pressure on them."

developing confidence and individual talents

Frustrated to know that your child could succeed but is making slow progress?

Is it because of going unnoticed in a large school or a large class size?

Is your child lacking the confidence to flourish?

At Dover College, we are as keen as any other school to cater for the most able pupils and do it well. However, our recent inspection highlighted our great ability as a school to enable our more average pupils to achieve far better than their potential suggested on entry. By offering boys and girls timely affirmation and appropriate challenges in a caring environment, many of them surprise their parents and, more importantly, themselves with their achievements.

Dover College welcomes pupils at any time of the year if there is a place available.

Tickets are £15 each from www.pizzaexpresslive.com.

Remembering a rock 'n' roll hero

BUDDY - THE BUDDY HOLLY STORY

Tuesday, February 1, to Saturday, February 5
Orchard Theatre, Dartford.

THE world's most successful rock 'n' roll musical has had audiences rocking in the aisles for decades, and it's back in Kent soon.

Buddy - The Buddy Holly Story will come to the Orchard Theatre in Dartford next month, 52 years after the legend's passing and "the day the music died".

That famous phrase was coined by Don McLean, in the song 'American Pie'.

Holly died in a plane crash, but his legacy was already cemented.

That fateful day will forever be ingrained on the memory of Maria Elena, widow of Charles Hardin 'Buddy' Holley (the 'e' was dropped after his name was misspelled on a recording contract).

Each year she commemorates the passing of her husband, who was just 22 when he died, in the same way.

"I pray for Buddy, like I do every night," she begins. "I light a candle, I buy flowers, and stay home. I just remember him as he was when I met him."

The couple had been married less than six months when the small plane carrying Buddy, 17-year-old Ritchie Valens, J.P. 'the Big Bopper' Richardson, 28, and pilot Roger Peterson, 21, plummeted from the night sky into a frozen Iowa cornfield.

Though the 50 years that have passed have dulled some of the pain, the shattering impact of the accident still remains with Maria Elena.

"When Buddy died it was so sudden," she reflects. "Those kinds of deaths are very, very difficult to deal with because you don't have the chance to say goodbye."

The circumstances surrounding Buddy's inclusion on the Winter Dance Party Tour of 1959 only add to the sense of tragedy.

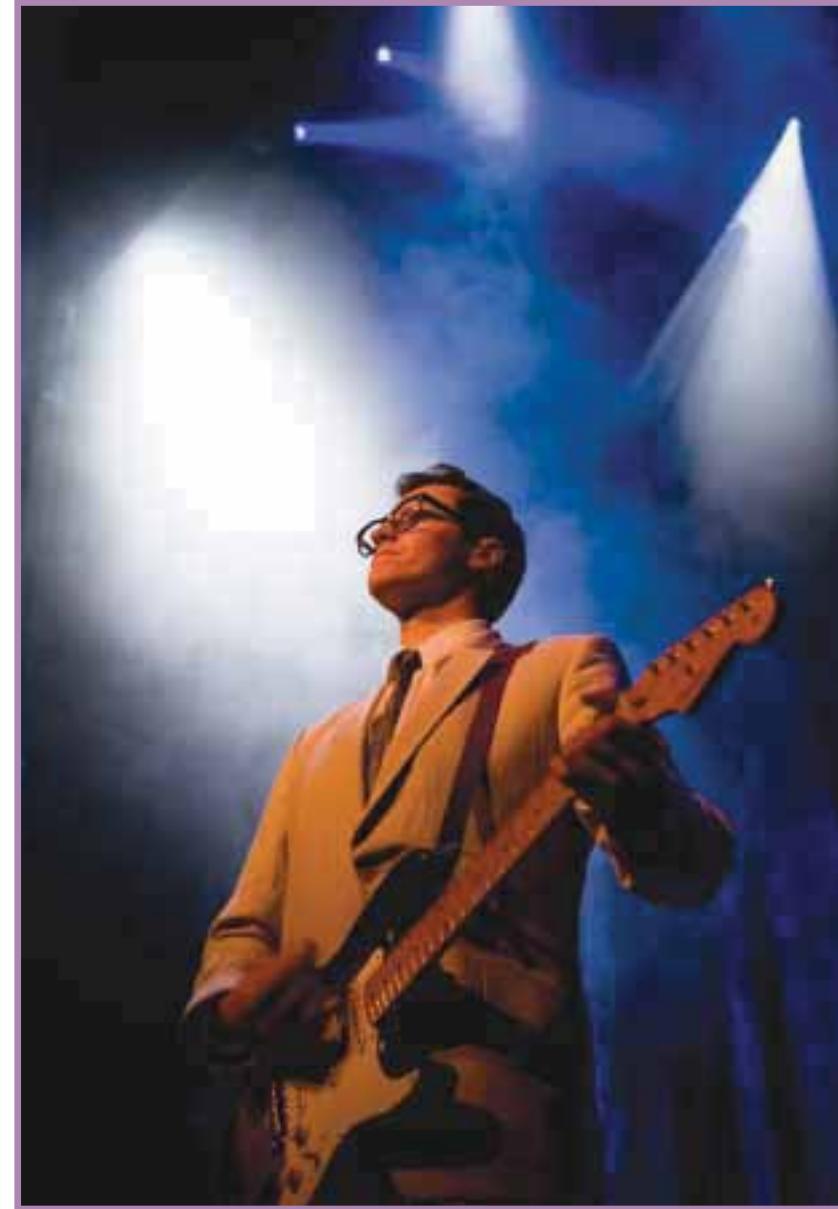

"He left home against my will, I was pregnant," she says. "He said 'it will be a short tour - I just can't continue without getting my own money to do what we're planning to do.' We had plans to open record companies and our own publishing company, and Buddy also wanted to develop new artists, even at that time."

To commemorate this special occasion, the smash-hit West End musical Buddy - The Buddy Holly Story will be rocking The Orchard, Dartford, with a performance on the anniversary of Buddy's death, proving that the music, like Buddy's legacy, lives on.

Maria Elena Santiago was 25 when she and Buddy married in August 1958, less than two months after they first met.

Folklore has it that Maria Elena had a premonition about the crash before he left for the tour.

"Absolutely, as a matter of fact we were both dreaming," she confirms.

"Buddy had a dream about leaving me on top of a building and I dreamed about a comet, this great ball of fire coming down. It came past me and made a hole in the ground. I could see the fire coming out of that hole."

"The day after (Buddy) was leaving and I was packing for both of us, but he said 'I told you, I can't bring you with me, you're pregnant.'

Having discovered news of the crash on television, Maria Elena says she fell into a "catatonic state", unable to digest what had happened. She miscarried soon after.

The show has been a worldwide smash, and recalls the heyday of the legendary Holly.

All the hits are here and tickets will sell fast.

Tickets, priced between £20 and £27.50 each, are available from www.orchardtheatre.co.uk, or by calling the box office on 01322 220000.

THE NEW SQUADRONAIRES

Friday, February 4, Woodville Halls, Gravesend

DO YOU remember the original Squadronaires from the 1940s?

Officially known as the No 1 RAF Dance Band, the musicians soon adopted the unofficial name 'The Squadronaires' and went on to win the prestigious Melody Maker award for five consecutive years. Their successors will enthral at this show in Gravesend.

Originally formed by the RAF, with a view to emulating the popularity with the troops of the American bands of the day, and to help boost morale, the Squadronaires went on to surpass even the most popular of the American bands. The orchestra was reformed under the leadership of trumpet player Greg Francis (the bandleader of the Memphis Belle Swing Orchestra and the movie Memphis Belle) and a change of presentation and musical content was made.

Based on, and as a tribute to, the wartime orchestra, the band consists of young musicians, looking as they did then, and playing the swing music of the era, including Glenn Miller, Tommy Dorsey, Harry James, Benny Goodman, Artie Shaw and more.

The show starts at 8pm. Tickets are £15, or £13 for concessions. To book, call the box office on 01474 337774.

THE THREE DEGREES

Friday, January 28, Central Theatre, Chatham

THE Three Degrees can't wait to see you again.

The longest-running line-up of the group comes to Chatham this month to wow audiences with a full playlist of their hits.

Once famously known as Prince Charles's favourite group, the trio will delight fans eager to hear their music again.

Boasting more than 40 years in the business and with some timeless classics in their repertoire, their best-known hit, When Will I See You Again? will no doubt feature on the evening.

The Three Degrees were formed in about 1963 in Philadelphia and were discovered by producer and songwriter Richard Barrett, who was responsible for groups of the 1950s such as The Chantels, Little Anthony and the Imperials, and The Valentines.

Over a long career, the group slowly found their way to the top, really making their mark in the 70s and 80s with mainstream chart success.

The tour line-up is Cynthia Garrison, Valerie Holiday and Helen Scott. Tickets for the show are £19 or £21.50 each. Call 01634 338338 to book, or visit www.whatsonmedway.co.uk.

ROY CHUBBY BROWN

Wednesday, January 26,
The Orchard Theatre, Dartford

OFFENSIVE, controversial and hugely successful, Roy Chubby Brown is touching down in Dartford.

The flying hat and goggles-wearing Northerner has put more bums on seats than most other comics, and has one of the most devoted fanbases in the laughter business.

His ribald live routines are blue and draw huge crowds, no matter what town he's in.

Few subjects are deemed too sensitive to be touched on, and the language will be blue.

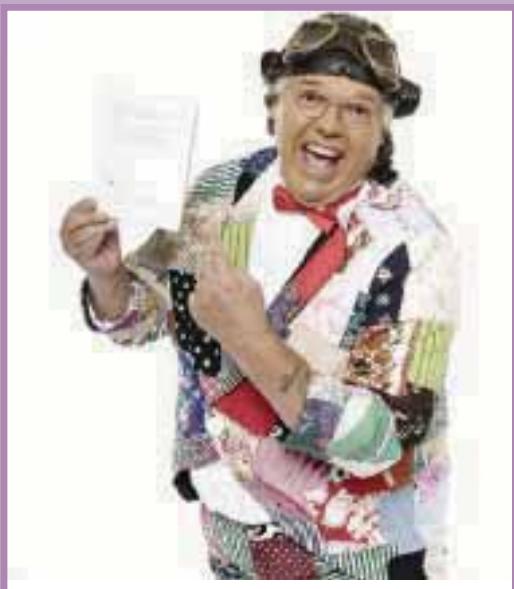

Get set for a barnstorming night of banter, hilarious mickey-taking and humour from Britain's most outrageous comedian, who uses a non-stop battering ram of jokes and tales during his shows.

You'll be in the presence of one of the scenes biggest characters but it's not for the easily offended.

The tour ends in April, but this is Chubby's only date in Kent. Tickets are £22.50 each from www.orchardtheatre.co.uk, or call 01322 220000.

Bookings of over 40 people will receive a free finger buffet, but call 01322 220000 for information.

The show starts at 7.30pm and is not suitable for children.

AN AUDIENCE WITH PETER AND DAN SNOW

Sunday, January 30,
The Orchard Theatre, Dartford

FATHER and son team Peter and Dan Snow have established themselves as two of the country's most watchable historians, with their popular TV shows.

Following the success of their books and popular television series, Battlefield Britain and 20th Century Battles, they present an entertaining evening as they discuss highlights and take audience questions.

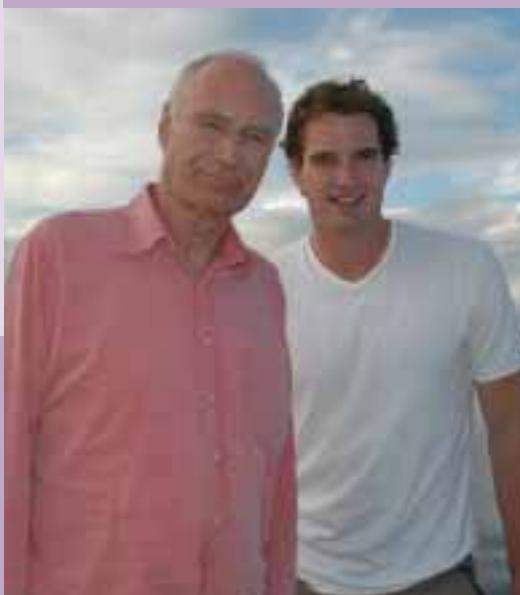

Dan is Peter's youngest son and the pair have forged a close relationship presenting the shows since 2003.

Battlefield Britain looked at the massive battles that have shaped Britain's history, from Boudicca's destructive rebellion against the Romans to the incredible feats of The Few who saw off the Luftwaffe.

The show received a BAFTA and was shown on the BBC to great acclaim. The 20th Century Battles show which followed made them even more well-known.

Peter Snow was already a familiar face to viewers, due to his exploits as a Newsnight presenter and election specialist.

The show starts at 7.30pm. For tickets call the box office on 01322 220000.

MARC ANTOINE AND PAUL BROWN

Friday, January 28, Pizza Express, Maidstone

THIS pair join the impressive roll-call of those who have played at Pizza Express in the last few months.

Playing songs from last year's Foreign Exchange joint album, Marc Antoine is well known to regulars, and Paul, aside from his solo musical projects, is also one of the leading producers in the smooth jazz world.

He is responsible for number one hits for various artists, including Pizza Express favourite Peter White.

Both men are excellent guitarists with a broad repertoire.

Marc Antoine has performed in the past with Basia, Soul II Soul, Guru's Jazzmatazz, The Solsonics, Queen Latifah, acid jazz DJ GreyHoy, Rick Braun, Sting and the late Selena.

Paul Brown is the producer per se in the smooth jazz genre. He has performed with Al Jarreau, Boney James, Jeffery Osborne, Kirk Whalum, Larry Carlton, George Benson, Patti Austin and many more.

Paul and Marc will be joined by Oli Silk on keyboards, Otto Williams on bass and Tony Mason on drums.

The show is at 8pm. Tickets are £25 from www.pizzaexpresslive.com.

Swank toughs it out as devoted sister takes on US legal system

■ BY DAMON SMITH

FEW modern actresses embody working-class pluck and ballsiness on screen as compellingly as Hilary Swank.

She collected her first Oscar in 2000 for her scintillating portrayal of murdered transgender teenager Brandon Teena in Boys Don't Cry.

Five years later, Swank was back at the podium for her revelatory performance as a gutsy boxer in Clint Eastwood's tear-jerker, Million Dollar Baby.

She famously celebrated that victory by tucking into a hamburger and fries at a fast food restaurant with her coveted golden statuette resting on the table next to the napkins and condiments.

Now, the Oscar-winning actress gets beneath the skin of another crusading real-life heroine in Conviction.

Inspired by the story of a sister's unwavering devotion to her jailbird brother, Tony Goldwyn's film condenses an extraordinary 18-year quest for justice into a lean 107-minute courtroom thriller that confirms one (wo)man can make a difference.

Betty Anne Waters (Swank) is a wife and mother of two in Massachusetts, who has always defended her troublemaker older brother, Kenny (Sam Rockwell).

In 1980, Kenny is questioned about the murder of diner waitress Katharina Brow, but he is released, to the chagrin of local cop Nancy Taylor (Melissa Leo).

Two years later, ex-girlfriends Roseanna Perry (Juliette Lewis) and Brenda Marsh (Clea DuVall) testify against Kenny and seal a murder conviction, resulting in a life sentence without parole.

Betty refuses to accept the verdict and puts herself through college and law school in order to prove her brother's innocence.

Her marriage implodes, and she is left to raise their two sons, Richard (Conor Donovan) and Ben (Owen Campbell).

Aided by law school pal Abra Rice (Minnie Driver), Betty brings the case to the attention of attorney Barry Scheck (Peter Gallagher), from the Innocence Project, a non-profit organisation set up to help wrongly-convicted people overturn their sentences.

Conviction is a remarkable true story that provides Swank with a meaty central role that wrings tears and fury in equal measure.

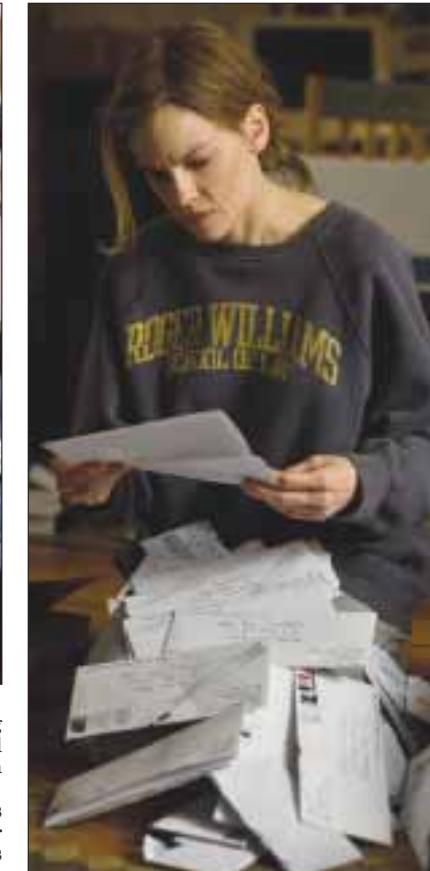

The actress doesn't strike a false emotional note and she gels convincingly with Rockwell as the hot-headed prisoner, who seems worryingly capable of the brutal crime.

Driver is a spunky sidekick, generating some much needed flashes of comic relief amid all of the legal wrangling: "I hate the damn legal system. It's so inconvenient!"

Screenwriter Pamela Gray stacks the odds heavily against Betty and Abra, so their valiant efforts leave us cheering in the aisles when it seems they might finally have discovered a flaw in the prosecution's case.

The seriousness of Kenny's situation is brought home when one character coldly observes: "If Massachusetts had the death penalty, he'd be dead by now."

On one point at least, the law worked in his favour.

AGAINST ALL ODDS: Sam Rockwell, left, as Kenny, and above, Hilary Swank as Betty in a tale of family loyalty

IT'S A WRAP: Explorer Bruce Parry shows us how to dress for Arctic weather

YOUR TV REVIEW ARCTIC WITH BRUCE PARRY: BBC2, 9pm, Sunday

■ BY ED HILL

only just beginning to rediscover their spiritual past.

The former Marine seems to have a unique way of bonding with the people he is studying. Despite the language barrier he managed to get one reindeer herder to open up and discuss how drink, modern Russian life and family breakdown had resulted in him returning to his roots to try to regain some self worth. The next episode saw him travelling to Greenland. This was much more familiar arctic territory, with broad landscapes of snow and ice. This time Bruce was spending time with the Inuit people, following their hunts for seal, walrus and polar bear, made a lot easier these days I imagine by powerful hunting rifles.

But like former programmes presented by Bruce, he highlights how these ancient communities are just as vulnerable as the rest of us to the attractions of the modern world with its flat screen TVs, cars and computers. It's understandable they should want as many of the comforts as the rest of us, but sadly it seems their heritage is soon forgotten. Greenland demonstrated this very clearly.

As the ice melts (due to global warming), a land full of rich metallic deposits is revealed. Mining will soon be the main economy of the country and the old seal hunters will be a thing of the past.

Already kids from broken Inuit families are being taken on confidence-boosting trips to teach them how to fish and reconnect with their ancestry.

What Car? Top Car is A1

AS BEFITS its model description, Audi's new A1 premium hatchback has landed the What Car? Magazine's prestigious Car of the Year title.

Now posing a real challenge to the BMW Mini, What Car? editor-in-chief Steve Fowler said: "The A1 is brilliantly targeted and brilliantly executed.

"More and more buyers are looking for smaller, more efficient cars, but with all the luxury trappings of much larger cars. That's exactly what Audi has given them – a super-stylish, high quality small car that's affordable and great fun, too."

Hyundai plays three door trick with coupé

IT HAS been two years since Hyundai bowed out of the coupé market.

So a new coupe glamour car was well overdue and we'll get one later this year.

It's more than striking to look at too, because the new Veloster will have a unique three-door configuration – two main side doors and one rear side door for easier access to the rear seats, plus disguised exterior handle to maintain the coupé look.

It will be offered with a twin-clutch auto/manual transmission option.

Seat refusing to jump on the VAT bandwagon

SPANISH marque Seat is blowing away New Year gloom with an extended VAT-free offer and VAT cuts, despite the UK tax rising to 20 per cent.

Various offers run until March 31 and are even available to small vehicle fleets as well as private buyers.

The VW-owned marque is pointing out too that Kent commuters into London can benefit from ultra-low emission and road tax exempt Ibiza and Leon E Econotive versions escaping the daily Congestion Charge for the capital – newly hiked from £8 to £10.

GREEN MACHINE: The Mitsubishi Colt Cleartec is more refined and quieter than its predecessor and offers further proof of the Japanese brand's development in the eco-friendly stakes or a more upright five-door mini-MPV.

The latter in 94bhp 1.3 CZ2 Cleartec form is our test car and looks great value at £10,599.

In addition to keen pricing and Auto Stop & Go savings, you also gain economy and reduced emissions from low rolling resistance tyres, a higher top gear, improved alternator and lower viscosity oil.

These add up to just 119g/km of CO2 emissions or the lowest payable road tax band (£30/year) and average mpg in the mid-50s for the Cleartec.

You don't feel compromised by the eco features either; the Cleartec accelerates faster than its conventional sister model, no doubt helped by the narrower and harder tyres, and the car handles tidily on a windy road.

Mind you, acting the fool in this eco-friendly car exposes the Colt's slightly jittery ride, but this is a rare complaint. The car is more refined and quieter than before too, after intensive sound absorption work.

The revamp has cost some versatility after replacement of the folding/removable rear seats by a conventional fixed/fold flat arrangement, but this delivers more boot space without compromising head and leg room.

PROPERTY NEWS

Winter brings call to go online to cut bills

HOMEOWNERS using online energy plans are paying £140 a year less on average for heating and hot water and £229 less on total bills than customers on standard tariffs, according to new research by uSwitch.com

The news comes as UK families face higher energy prices and one of the coldest winters in a century, with each cold snap adding about £7 a week on to fuel bills.

However, while the typical household now faces an annual energy bill of £1,239 a year – up 3.8 per cent from September 2010 – online customers are typically paying £229 a year less for their total energy bills.

Tom Lyon, energy expert at uSwitch.com, said: "When winter fuel bills start to hit doormats consumers could be in for a nasty shock. They will be facing the combined impact of winter price rises along with a potential £7 a week additional cost caused by severe cold weather."

"The concern is that many will react by cutting down on heating and hot water, whereas they could cut the cost of these essentials by £140 a year by moving online."

Mr Lyon added that online energy plans are "consistently the most competitive" on the market.

Owners 'improving homes for the future'

DIY HOME improvements among Britain's property owners are fast approaching an all-time high, one expert has said.

Anna-Marie DeSouza, editor of Build It Magazine, said new DIY books, TV shows and celebrities had helped make renovations and interior design more fashionable and accessible.

"Now more than ever before, people are enjoying spending their time and money improving their home," she said.

Meanwhile, a recent HSBC survey revealed that Brits are now more likely to 'make do and mend' than they were 12 months ago.

According to the research, 50 per cent of homeowners would seek a repair estimate on a broken household appliance, rather than splashing out on a replacement.

Ms DeSouza added that UK households are currently "investing in their homes" in an effort to "future-proof" their property for years to come.

Buyers' confidence low as uncertainty continues

■ BY NICK AMES

A SURVEY of 5,287 homeowners by online property website Zoopla.co.uk has revealed housing market confidence is at a two-year low.

Despite this, more than half – 54 per cent – of those questioned said they expect house prices to rise over the first six months of 2011.

But this is down from the 81 per cent reported this time last year.

The website's housing market sentiment survey found that the number of homeowners who expect property prices to fall over the six-month period is currently at one in three, up from one in four last quarter.

Meanwhile, those surveyed expect house prices to grow by 1.9 per cent over the six-month period, down from an expected three per cent rise three months ago.

Many experts have predicted that the housing market will remain subdued in 2011, due to uncertainty surrounding the economy and the ongoing mortgage rationing by lenders.

The recent weather has also been bad news for the market.

December's heavy snowfall had a negative impact on many companies and housebuilder Persimmon was no exception.

The housebuilder, which is the UK's second largest by market value, said sales activity fell by 50 per cent in December, but said it had seen an encouraging start to the year.

The company reported a considerable increase in underlying profits for 2010, after turnover rose by 10 per cent to £1.57 billion.

Furthermore, completions were up to 9,384 in 2010 – compared with 8,976 the previous year.

Commenting, the company said: "It is too early in the New Year to assess the likely outcome of the forthcoming spring sales season.

"However, we believe that prospective purchasers who may have postponed visits to our developments due to the harsh weather conditions prior to the year-end, will return during the coming weeks."

In related news, the Halifax revealed UK house prices fell by 1.3 per cent last month compared with November.

The latest house price fall takes the average cost of a UK home to £162,435, the Halifax said.

According to the lender, which is part of the Lloyds Banking Group, house prices are now 1.6 per cent lower than a year ago.

Parents can borrow to help kids move out

HOUSEBUILDER Barratt is aiming to help kick-start the housing market by launching a scheme that allows parents to borrow money to get their children on to the property ladder.

The initiative with Hitachi Capital (UK) PLC is designed to tackle the problems faced by young people who cannot secure mortgages without massive deposits.

The company announced the planned scheme in a trading update that showed its average selling prices jumped by about six per cent to around £176,000 from July to December last year.

It completed 4,832 sales, down from 5,053 in the same period a year earlier, with almost three in 10 sales using shared equity schemes such as the Government's HomeBuy Direct initiative.

Barratt expects sales to be about £875m for the six months, slightly up on last year's £872.4m, but its operating margin has doubled to five per cent.

Chief executive Mark Clare said: "The group has delivered a significant improvement in both average selling prices and operating margin, even though sales volumes have been affected by difficult trading conditions.

"We are on course to make further progress as we open new higher margin sites and continue to be value and quality-focused."

Why the independent trader is more important than ever

THIS is our fourth supplement celebrating some local success stories and finding out what's in it for you, our readers.

We discover that independent stores really do offer an alternative to the chainstores that dominate our town centres, offering you an alternative and more varied way to spend your hard-earned money.

Equally, we hope this supplement will inspire some of you to take the plunge and have a go at being independent yourself.

recognising the customer benefits that that can bring.

So this is a small glimpse into the world of the independent trader, often operating locally, and offering a unique service.

We live in difficult times financially, but there is no doubt that those who are successful recognise the importance of great customer service.. and that's where you can reap rewards.

■ BY THE INSPIRATIONIST

LET'S get real. The internet is fantastic. It means we're all connected; at least that's the theory.

For example: Did you know YouTube now has more viewers than regular television?

So – in theory – that means we can all have the benefits of TV advertising at virtually no cost. Website home pages without video are so 20th century.

All we have to do is shoot a short video, upload it to YouTube and we're away: right?

Well, not quite. While it's true that search engines love video and that Google and YouTube are the most powerful search engines, but the internet is just another medium.

In the same way you can buy advertising space in print, radio or TV and run a terrible advert that achieves nothing, so can you create a terrible video, put it up on YouTube and your website and lose customers or still have people visit your site and ignore you.

But what if there was a way to create a captivating, compelling video that got viewers really interested in you and your products or services because it was you there 'in person', winning over your audience?

Let me ask you a question: Would it be useful to know what it is about you that makes people warm to you; want to do business with you; remember you and talk about you to others in glowing terms? You bet it would. And if you're an avid networker, chances are you already know some of that already.

When commercial radio came to Kent in 1984, my company was out there writing and making the commercials. I clearly remember just how excited business owners in Kent were about this new medium for advertising. But the same problem existed then as exists now: without great ads, your campaign just wouldn't attract the attention of your audience.

The problem at that time was the quality of the ads. No one in the county had any experience of commercial radio, so we all had to learn from scratch. And whilst initial curiosity got people tuning in, if what they heard wasn't interesting, people would switch off. So one way of solving the problem then was by creating ads that got noticed, which is precisely what our company did.

What will work today if we want to advertise on YouTube? Well, virtually the same thing, although now, we are a much more sophisticated audience. We all speak media-ese. We see with our media-eyes and listen with our media-ears.

So we will have to raise our game if we are to win new audiences and new customers.

Selling

We need to be even more understanding of the psychology of selling, the why of how to influence and persuade. We need to learn and understand the difference between interruption marketing and permission marketing and integrate the two.

The good news is that we now agree people buy from people, so we can forget hard sell. It's more about permission marketing, which means more gradually building up the trust, credibility, value and desirability of our service or products. And the best way to do that is to sell ourselves first.

After all, you only have to look at Richard Branson to realise that if the person behind the business is well-known, liked and trusted, selling the products becomes so much easier, even when – if you consider what Branson does – you change your business from music to airlines, or from mobile phones to credit cards. Your personality branding is the thing people remember and feel warm and friendly towards.

The same applies online. The growing number of small business owners who have a great online presence, many of whom are working from home and combining family life with their online business, means it has to be a crucial opportunity for anyone wanting to grow their business.

So, if you have the urge to promote yourself as 'the face of your business', here's a quick check list of the top three fatal mistakes to avoid:

The biggest single mistake I see businesses making online is to buy the most effective search engine optimisation or Google Ad Words before optimising the landing content. Whether the content your visitors land on is text, pictures, audio or video, it must be compelling. You've got just three seconds to stop them in their tracks or you've lost them and wasted the money you've spent on getting them to look at you.

It's a big mistake to be anonymous. My advice is for your name, and your picture, but ideally, your video to be there on your home page.

And when you send out 'company' emails, make sure they're from you, even if you're part of a larger firm, because it's you that I have a personal relationship with, not the company.

Consider this: you search for an osteopath and you browse two different sites as a result of your Google search. One site has Larry on video welcoming you in a friendly manner, sounding experienced, looking professional, and offering what looks like a great service in nice surroundings. The other site has just text; no picture; no video. Which are you more likely to choose?

Mistake number three is to create a website that tries to sell your product or service (with the exception of online retailers, like Amazon, etc.). If you consider that what you sell is a personal service, then sell the value of an on-going relationship with you and nothing else. In Seth Godin's Permission Marketing (the bible for internet marketing) the single most important sentence he writes is: "Your website should be 100 per cent focused on signing up strangers to give you permission to market to them."

Nothing beats face-to-face advice from someone you're able to trust

FINDING financial advice in this day and age is easy. From High Street building society posters to radio phone-ins, from newspaper pundits to online experts there is no shortage of the stuff.

Online may be easy and call centres can be quick (if you can get through), but nothing beats sitting down for a face-to-face chat with an expert you know you can trust and who will take the time to find out what you need and then help you find it.

Local advice, backed up by 30 years' experience, is on offer in Ashford from Simon Webster and his team at Facts & Figures Financial Planners, now based in new headquarters in Church Road, Ashford.

"There are so many different investment, savings and pension products out there that it is virtually impossible to recommend something without understanding the needs of the person sitting in front of you," said Simon.

"There is a great deal of difference, for instance, between advising someone who is looking for a long-term return and who can live with short term fluctuations and finding the right product for someone who may need their money back in a year's time and can't take any risks.

"Because everyone is different, we are committed to getting the best deal for every customer, whether that's in terms of a cheaper mortgage, a better pension, the right investment income or sound advice on reducing their liability to inheritance tax."

As well as being regulated by the Financial Services Authority, Facts & Figures is one of just three per cent of independent financial advisers that can describe themselves as 'chartered financial planners', an accolade of which Simon is understandably proud.

TEAM WORK: Staff at Facts & Figures Financial Planning with Minister for Immigration and Ashford MP Damian Green

Facts & Figures is very much a family business, with Simon's wife Pam playing a major role. The firm now employs nine people and was set up 17 years ago, although Simon has spent more than 30 years advising clients.

As well as independent financial and mortgage advice, Facts & Figures can advise companies on employee benefits as well as group life and pension schemes. The firm also offers advice on inheritance tax, life and critical illness insurance, health and private medical insurance and retirement planning.

At the start of a new decade Simon offered three pieces of advice to readers: "Make sure you set yourself a household budget and stick to it, ask for independent advice on finding a better mortgage deal than your current offer and make sure you are getting the right advice on your pension.

"With building society interest rates now hardly keeping pace with inflation, it's worth bearing in mind that the stock market climbed by about 25 per cent last year, which means there could be better long-term investment opportunities out there."

Why local reaps

Nick Ames explains why despite a revolution in how people spend their money online sometimes across half the world, there are still enormous social and economic benefits from spending your money closer to home

IN THE years before long distance and high-speed transportation and advanced communication technologies, almost all business exchanges took place in the nearby community.

Food was grown or produced in the area where the shop which sold it was situated and working with local businesses was a matter of convenience and even necessity.

Today, with global trade dominated by multinational corporations, it has actually become more convenient for most of us to purchase goods produced far from our homes, as the wide range of products in supermarkets shows.

Prices are competitive and what is on offer is all under one roof.

But there are many modern reasons to use local businesses as well, ranging from building community to keeping capital within local economies.

Using local businesses creates a relationship between neighbours and helps to build our communities.

The people who live and work in an immediate area share common ambitions and interests, such as keeping neighbourhoods safe and clean. They rely on each other in emergencies, and see each other on the street and at the store.

By supporting businesses owned and run by people within a community, people create an extra layer of interdependence, and make daily relationships deeper and more meaningful.

benefits for all

If a customer buys a substandard product from a business halfway around the world, they can be sure that the company doesn't genuinely care about whether it meets their needs, although they may follow good business practices and take responsibility for its malfunction.

But if shoppers buy something from their neighbour they're more likely to be accountable because they are in regular contact.

Also word gets around – if someone is unhappy with a purchase they are sure to tell friends. So stores have to keep standards up to stop business falling off.

By using local products, people contribute to building local economies.

Money spent at a chain store means the profit from that transaction goes to a company at some distant location.

But when supporting local businesses, the proprietors are more likely to spend the money they make from purchase at another local business. In this way our money remains within our communities, building a an economy that enriches everyone involved.

Shoppers buying from stores which in turn bring in goods from local manufacturers, producers or farmers means everyone benefits.

By using local businesses the environment is helped as well.

Products that have been produced at distant locations need to be transported to stores. The environmental cost of all this shipping and trucking adds up. This is particularly true with fruits and vegetables, which, on average, are grown 1,500 miles from the supermarkets that sell them.

In addition to the cost of shipping, the infrastructure of storing and handling fresh produce uses considerable inputs of energy for refrigeration.

The chemical preservatives in many processed food products are also a direct result of a food distribution system that has strayed far from its localised beginnings.

In order to store food for extended periods of time and ship it to distant places, manufacturers need to pump it full of chemicals in order to extend its shelf life.

This is not the case when food produced by local businesses is purchased.

A quarter century of quality

THE boss of an expanding Ashford company will be cutting cake instead of curtain fabric when his team celebrates 25 years in business this month.

Vic King, who heads up Kingfisher Blinds, based in Cradlebridge Drive, set up the blind and curtain concern at the end of 1985 and continues to lead from the front. He does all the measuring for the company's bespoke curtains and blinds and he is happiest when dealing with customers.

Although Kingfisher has built up a loyal following amongst homeowners who visit the Ashford shop, Vic and his team have also supplied blue chip companies, government institutions, universities, small businesses and retailers.

All the company's curtains and blinds are made to measure and the Kingfisher range includes the latest products from around the world.

"I have spent 25 years working with every type of blind and thrive on solving problems and meeting unusual requests," said Vic. "I have built the company by listening to clients, offering friendly advice and focusing on quality and service."

The family-based company includes Vic's wife Marion, who does much of the behind-the-scenes work, and son-in-law Alan, who takes care of the installations.

With expansion very much in Vic's mind he is about to announce the arrival of a new business development manager designed to launch the company into its second quarter century by looking for new opportunities.

"At Kingfisher we have no intention of sitting back and waiting for the recession to end," he said. "We are determined to get out there and find new customers and we are confident we have the products that will help us to do so."

Those products include a huge range of curtains, blinds and shutters in every fabric imaginable and with every possible convenience, including automatic operation.

"We are leading the way in Britain with motorised and solar screen blinds and we know how to use blinds to keep the warmth in or the heat of the sun out, which is one way in which companies can reduce their carbon footprint," said Vic.

"We are working with the Environment Agency in the Carbon Reduction Commitment scheme and we are a member of the British Blind and Shutters Association."

Kingfisher Blinds is also very aware of keeping users safe, and Vic's team automatically fits failsafe devices to new blind installations to protect young children from getting tangled in cords. The simple, low-cost devices can also be retrofitted to existing blinds to provide peace of mind to people who want to keep their children or grandchildren safe.

"We are committed to making blinds safe for everyone and will happily carry out a free survey of anyone's existing blinds, however old and regardless of who originally installed them," Vic commented.

• For your free survey or to find out more call Vic at Kingfisher Blinds on 01233 642971.

This expert may even be able to help answer your query for free

THE technological revolution that has changed the world in recent years has been so all-embracing that it is easy to forget there are those for whom logging on, downloading and Googling are not second nature.

It's true that many of those who once used to rely on their children to programme the video recorder now chat online, do their shopping without leaving the house and rattle off half a dozen emails before breakfast, but not all of us are quite so tech-savvy.

However there are still those who feel they have been left behind by a new technology that is putting an increasingly large chunk of the world beyond their reach as everything from their favourite television programme to their local library exhorts them to "go online to find out more".

Many of them will have been bought a computer, perhaps as a Christmas present, by family members who don't have the time or the expertise to explain how the new toy works – and that's where Ashford's Chris Anthony can help.

With 30 years' experience as a technical and network engineer working with companies including Microsoft and Hewlett Packard, Chris knows how computers work – but he also has a rare talent for passing that information on to newcomers.

Chris is happy to supply, install and train anyone of any age in all aspects of computing, but he specialises in what used to be called silver surfers – older users who are increasingly exploring the new horizons that technology can open up to them.

One of his clients, who lives in Eastridge, recently asked Chris to set up a second computer for him because the first one was too slow. No real surprise – except that the customer in question is 100 years old.

"There are huge numbers of people out there who would love to explore this new world but who just don't know where to start or who to ask for help," Chris explained. "I can do as much or as little as they need, from solving a one-off problem to installing a suite of programmes or providing training in a particular piece of software."

One of the concerns people have when it comes to asking for advice on anything to do

That's why Chris is upfront about his charges and has been known to deal with simple queries over the phone for free.

"I am interested in helping people who want to learn more about what their computer can do," he said. "I wouldn't charge someone if it took me two minutes to talk them through installing a new programme because I would much rather they felt they could trust me to show them how to use it properly."

Alongside numerous technical qualifications, Chris has recently completed the Open College Network's mentoring course, which he said gave him useful new insights into communicating effectively with people.

The combination of a relaxed approach, wide-ranging technical knowledge and a local response to helping those who feel computing has left them behind is set to introduce many more people to the wonders of technology in the coming year.

Decorating your own

Tattooing may draw mixed reactions from people but when it comes to running a business and customer service, understanding the customer and getting it right first time is essential. Jill Hurst spoke with tattoo artist Sooze about her work

A SCULPTOR from Teynham has joined the growing number of painters to diversify into the tattoo industry.

Working under her creative name of Sooze, she has launched Extreme Voltage in London Road, placing her passion for art at the core of the business.

She said: "My partner has run a tattoo business in Sittingbourne for many years and I've spent a lot of time there. I've always had an interest in tattoos but never thought of doing it until he suggested I set up on my own.

"For me the artwork and the quality of the artwork are very important. Tattoos are no longer just about pre-made flash work. People want customised pieces.

"So it's essential for people to have a very clear idea of what they want and understanding the artist's style is very important."

Sooze has an extensive portfolio including the work of one of her favourite artists – Gill

vn personal canvas

Elvgren, one of the most famous pin-up and glamour artists of the 20th century.

She also specialises in work by fantasy artist Boris Vallejo and art nouveau painter Alphonse Mucha.

Gil Elvgren (1914-80) was a classical American illustrator. While his career encompassed many different fields of commercial art his fame is undoubtedly due to a series of pin-ups he painted over a period of 30 years for Brown and Bigelow, calendar publishers of St Paul, Minnesota.

Alphonse Maria Mucha (1860-1939) is most often remembered for the role he played in shaping the aesthetics of French Art Nouveau.

Born in Lima, Peru, in 1941 Boris Vallejo attended the National School of Fine Arts in his native country before emigrating to the USA in 1964. He has since done a great volume of work for the fantasy field.

While more and more artists are trying their hand at the profession Sooze cautions it's not an easily transferable skill.

"You can have an excellent artist but their skills aren't always translated onto the skin – it's a very different canvas."

Sooze says anyone considering a tattoo should do their homework before rushing in. "Look at the tattooist's work and check out their reputation. Make sure they've been trained under proper supervision.

"You must also make sure they have all the correct health and safety requirements in place, including health and hygiene, sterilisation and the correct equipment."

• Extreme Voltage is a contemporary studio offering a range of modern facilities. It is open Monday to Friday from 11.30am to 6pm and Saturdays from 10.30am to 6pm. Call Sooze on 07786 569752 for more details.

Giving you the skills to go green

A NEW state-of-the-art Green Technologies Centre has been opened by Ableskills Ltd.

Just two months old, the centre is already helping to boost employment opportunities in the renewable energy sector.

It is part of a joined up approach, working with large companies such as Mitsubishi, Polypipe, Domus and Heating Plumbing Supplies (HPS) to try and encourage growth in the renewable jobs market for the south east.

Customers receive the best training and aftercare to ensure their own success and a positive experience for people installing green technologies on to their properties.

Ableskills Ltd has been trading for several years and has become one of the largest private training companies in the UK, with over 150 people going through different training programmes each week.

This is a real success story for the region and encourages more people to set up business and work to become successful in their own right.

The company has built up a superb reputation for training people in all disciplines of construction, from bricklaying, plastering through to electrics and plumbing and can push green opportunities further with this new centre and an investment approaching £1 million.

Jed Smith, from Ableskills, said: "We are ideally set to increase the skills in the south east, offer a route to employment or business start up and provide specific qualifications across a range of green technologies."

These include solar thermal, heat recovery systems, underfloor heating and rainwater harvesting.

Tim takes your health to heart when giving advice

FEW people would disagree that health insurance is a good thing; it's deciding where to go for it that can be more difficult.

It's one of those areas where good, local advice from someone who has the backing of a tried and tested organisation can make the difference between getting the cover you know you need and putting it off because you aren't sure who to trust.

Western Provident Association (WPA) is a leading UK health insurance company that is focused on delivering world class private health and dental insurance and has a heritage that goes back more than 100 years. Because the company has no shareholders, any surplus is invested in looking after customers.

Equally importantly, signing up with WPA does not mean talking to a faceless call centre operator or being forced to go online. Local representative Tim Chappell has customers across Kent and is determined to make sure people end up with the right cover for them.

"Each of my customers is important to me, not just as a customer but as an individual with particular needs and requirements regarding health care. I won't let anyone sign anything until I know we are providing something that will meet their needs."

It is that extra level of personal attention that makes WPA special, while the fact that there are no shareholders means premiums tend to be lower for similar levels of care.

The industry seems to agree that WPA provides customer service standards that are second to none, having presented the association with the British Insurance Award for Best Customer Care 2009.

Tim Chappell explained that health insurance was increasingly important at a time when the health service was under pressure, particularly for people who needed to stay in control of their lives.

"Even in the good times, the priority for the NHS is to treat as many people as possible, as quickly as possible, and that depends on fitting the patients into the system, not the other way round," he said.

WPA offers a range of different products that can replace or top up NHS care – WPA can even pay for NHS car parking – which makes it even more vital that someone with Tim's knowledge and experience is on hand to help.

"Health care is not an easy thing to organise and it takes time and experience to get to grips with what a new customer needs, how much they are prepared to pay and generally what kind of policy would suit their lifestyle best," explained Tim.

"There are plenty of companies that are just interested in making the sale, but as a local representative I take pride in talking to customers, spending time with them and making sure that they end up with the policy that suits their needs."

"I think that's what makes WPA different."

• To contact Tim Chappell, email tim.chappell@wpa.org.uk or call him on 01227 738863 or 07739 643569.

Cream of the crop

The closer you get to the person who produces your food, the more you know and the more control you have over what you actually eat.

Produced in Kent has shown how easy it is to shop locally and support local producers, receiving great food into the bargain – and it's delivered to your door. Nick Ames takes a look at how people are turning their backs on supermarket food to sample the best the county has to offer

CORNUCOPIA: Visit Kent tourism poster promoting the Goods reared on Kent farms and fruit and veg grown in the Garden of England.

Acres of orchards and fields are one of the first things visitors to the county notice, while the many oast houses bear testament to a fine tradition of brewing.

Kent's beer is renowned across the world – hops are even exported to specialist breweries in the United States – and the county makes some of the country's best wines and ciders, too.

According to campaign group Produced in Kent: "Local customers have a choice of some

so close to home

Shed in Canterbury, which offers an array of Kentish produce of the best produce anywhere in the world. The range and breadth of products available is second to none.

"The changing seasons provide us with a rich and varied diet, right on our doorstep – from spring lamb to the first strawberries, through to fresh cobnuts and winter vegetables."

John Ikerd, a retired agricultural economics professor who writes about the local food movement, says farmers who sell direct to local consumers need not give priority to packing, shipping and shelf-life issues and can instead "select, grow and harvest crops to ensure peak qualities of freshness, nutrition and taste".

Eating local also means eating seasonally, he adds, a practice much in tune with mother nature – as well as giving consumers something to look forward to as fruits and vegetables come into season and can be enjoyed fresh.

Local food is often safer, too, according to agricultural researchers who discovered that, even when it's not organic, small farms tend to be less aggressive than large factory farms, dousing products with chemicals.

Small farms are also more likely to grow more variety, according to the research, protecting biodiversity and preserving a wider agricultural gene pool, an important factor in long-term food security.

So in the aptly named Garden of England, customers can tuck in to seasonal, traceable, high-quality fare: seafood from Dover sole to Whitstable oysters, Romney Marsh lamb, along with apples, pears, plums and more.

Tours and tastings can be enjoyed at vineyards such as Chapel Down in Tenterden, and Lamberhurst Vineyards, or the one at Biddenden, where cider is also produced.

Tours are also arranged at the Shepherd Neame brewery in Faversham, where visitors can find out how Kentish hops are turned into pints.

Sheps combines a heritage of 300 years with attention to modern environmental issues and claiming the title of Britain's first "green" brewery.

Some of its hops are harvested just a mile away and tastings are always available in the bar attached to the historic brewery.

Reach for the sky – safely

WHILE good quality local services generally outshine one-size-fits-all offerings, some larger franchises are nonetheless based on good ideas.

Naz Cesur was so impressed with the ladder-free, pure water window cleaning system introduced by a franchise operation that he took it on in Ashford – and then bought it out.

It means the My Home cleaning service he now runs in and around Ashford is a truly local company, and one that sees Naz regularly rolling up his sleeves to make sure his team delivers the best possible service.

This 21st century approach to window cleaning uses a detergent-free, pure water cleaning method that gives windows a longer-lasting shine without the hassle.

From a health and safety view it ticks all the boxes by using a pole-based system that means the operator keeps his feet firmly on the ground, however high the windows. The system is flexible enough to tackle office blocks as well as domestic homes, and with no ladders the system is far safer.

It also works. When Naz was asked to clean two replica Battle of Britain fighters, ready for the 70th anniversary Memorial Day celebrations at Capel-le-Ferne, he was delighted to help out.

Naz cleaned the Hurricane and Spitfire free as a mark of respect for the veterans who fought off the invasion threat from the Luftwaffe in 1940.

He did such a good job that the Battle of Britain Memorial Trust, which runs the site at Capel, cancelled plans to have the planes repainted because they came up as good as new. He also cleaned the hardstanding ready for the annual ceremony, which was especially significant during the anniversary year.

TOP FLIGHT: Naz Cesur cleaning Hurricane replica at Capel

Battle of Britain fighters are a bit unusual even for Naz, who claims to clean "anything that stands still long enough", but he uses the same system to clean patios, brickwork, decking, drives, signs and fascias, as well as tackling messy jobs like clearing out the gutters.

The My Home system also means homeowners don't need to worry about ladder feet in the middle of their flowerbeds or guttering being bent out of shape.

My Home also uses technology to make life much easier for the customer. A text, email or phone message alerts the householder to the date of the next visit, which is helpful if a gate needs to be unlocked or the family dog needs to be shut in the house.

When it comes to paying there's no need to leave the money outside in a tin or miss your favourite programme when the window cleaner pops back to collect his cash.

Options range from standing order to online payment, all designed to make life as easy as possible.

My Home also cleans conservatories, again using the ladder-free system to let the sun through the glass without running any risk of someone's foot going through it.

Pop in for a pint and a chat at friendly local

PART of the attraction of a pint at 'the local' used to be a chat with 'mine host', inevitably someone who had seen life and could be relied on to tell a good tale or two.

That scenario is harder to find these days as theme pubs and national chains with professional managers have increasingly replaced traditional landlords, but there are still corners of the Kentish countryside where a true local can still be found.

One of those quintessential English pubs is the World's Wonder at Warehorne, where John Roberts and his wife Kathy have put down roots after busy careers that have taken them as far afield as Dubai.

When it comes to a chat over a pint, John can drop more names and share more experiences than most, having rubbed shoulders with royalty as well as with The Who, the Rolling Stones, Elton John, Pink Floyd and Roxy Music.

The World's Wonder, which is on the Kenarlington Road, also distinguishes itself by focusing on freshly-prepared meals using locally-sourced, free-range produce.

"We cook and prepare all the meals on the premises and we never serve packet foods or pre-packed meals," explained John. "Our business model demands a chef, not a cook, and we are delighted to have Ian Williamson working in that role to help us prove that the World's Wonder is 'where meals are to dine for'."

John left school in 1966 to join the Navy as a radio mechanic in the Fleet Air Arm and left four years later to work for an electronic business machine company producing early versions of modern desktop calculators.

He then joined a company called Electrosonic, an industry leader in lighting control, audio and audiovisual systems.

The company boasted a top-flight client list, and it was as field service engineer that John met members of the royal family as well as a huge number of celebrities.

The company also introduced John to the world of microprocessor control systems which was to see him travel to Dubai as an electronic systems specialist in 1982.

Made redundant for the first time in the early 90, John began writing bespoke software for SCA, but when redundancy loomed again 10 years later, John decided it was time to pursue his ambition and set up a pub.

"Kathy and I decided that we would move to a beautiful part of Kent and set up a really great pub selling good beer and fine local food."

The couple have worked hard to ensure the popular gastro-pub has delivered on its promise of freshly-prepared meals using quality local ingredients, and events such as pudding nights, gourmet nights and game nights ensure a steady flow of customers.

The pub also plays an active part in the community, with John taking on the role of Father Christmas at the local school as well as supporting local events. The pub has a website at www.worldswonder.co.uk and can be contacted on 01233 732431.

Family firm aims

Every good garage knows that if you treat a customer well, they will keep coming back, and for the driver, finding the right garage is one of the most important decisions they can make.

Malcolm Triggs meets one of the most successful local garages in Kent to discover some of its success secrets.

WHILE personal service from an established family business is often seen as the holy grail of our modern, pre-packed lives, there are times when things have to move on.

Ashford-based D&D Autos spent 25 years building up a loyal fan base as an independent, family-run garage on the outskirts of Ashford town centre, before moving to a purpose-built unit on an industrial park.

The move from Victoria Road to a smart, sleek and very new-looking building in Moat Way, on Orbital Park, could have been seen as giving in to modern ways, but by keeping customer service at the core of the D&D Autos offer, Derek Pestridge and his team made sure it was quickly seen as a huge success.

It was a move that allowed D&D Autos to leave a jumble of different premises in an area where parking was a problem, facilities for customers were challenging and there simply wasn't enough space to offer more services.

Now based on the prestige Orbital Park, D&D Autos can offer a wider range of services while providing much better surroundings for customers, as well as the workforce – and all without sacrificing the tiniest bit of the local customer service that has set them apart since 1983.

D&D Autos services, repairs and carries out MOT tests on all popular makes of cars, and specialises in VW, Audi, Seat and Skoda.

As a family-run business, D&D Autos is quick to respond to local needs, which is why the garage is currently offering a winter health check that covers everything from coolant and brake fluid levels to anti-freeze strength, tyres, exhaust system and a visual check on brake pads and discs.

The free service takes just 30 minutes, which can be spent enjoying a cup of tea or coffee in the comfortable reception area.

The improved services on offer following the move to Orbital Park also resulted in D&D Autos winning Ashford Invicta Chamber's award for Excellence in Customer Service 2010, as well as picking up a Highly Commended award in the flagship Business of the Year category.

D&D Autos also offers computerised four-wheel alignment that could prove vital to anyone who has driven on Kent's pothole-

to keep you on the road

crazed roads following the recent weeks of ice, snow and sub-zero temperatures.

Only the most careful or the luckiest drivers will have avoided all those potholes, which makes checking their wheel alignment a necessity for virtually all the county's drivers.

Correct wheel alignment is critical to safe driving, as well as making tyres last longer, reducing fuel consumption, improving handling and improving the driving experience.

Modern suspension systems are complex, and the only way to check the alignment of all four wheels properly is to use modern, high-tech kit of the kind to be found at the new Moat Way premises of D&D Autos.

It's another new service that the garage couldn't offer from the older, cramped premises, but can now deliver to all its loyal customers as well as to increasing numbers of new ones.

"We just couldn't provide either the quality or the choice of services we wanted to offer when we were based in Victoria Road, and when I couldn't find anything suitable in the town we took the plunge and designed our own building in Moat Way," explained Derek Pestridge.

"It has given us the space and facilities we needed to provide our service across a wider range of activities," he said.

Early birds get free breakfast

TWO Sittingbourne businesses have joined forces to provide early morning workers with the most important meal of the day.

JCB Volkswagen Van Centre and Sittingbourne Cafe launched a temporary customer service initiative in 2009 to provide JCB's service customers with a breakfast voucher while their vehicle was being worked on.

But after more than 1,000 people used the 'early bird' service in the first year, it's now being introduced permanently.

Matt Rochester, aftersales manager at JCB Sittingbourne Van Centre, said: "Every month, nearly 100 service customers come to our St Michael's Road site enjoy a breakfast at the Sittingbourne Cafe while they wait for work to be carried out on their vehicle.

"The phenomenal success of the early bird initiative has taken us all by surprise and we've now decided to make it permanent.

"We introduced it for customers who need to be on the road early and we're delighted with the positive feedback."

Steve Beard, from Chatham-based Rainham Refrigeration, said: "It's a fantastic idea and means our vans are serviced without any impact on the working day. "The food is great and we'll be using this service every time our vehicles serviced or in for an MOT."

Matt added: "JCB's service department is open from 6am, but as the cafe opens at 7am, customers can enjoy refreshments in our waiting area until breakfast is served."
